

A program for all health professionals and health workers with an interest in women's cancers in culturally and linguistically diverse communities.

Communicating about cancer with women from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds

This program will explore some challenges and strategies for effective communication about breast and gynaecological cancers including screening in a culturally and linguistically diverse context.

Topics will include:

- Brief overview of breast and gynaecological cancers among women from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds
- Common challenges when communicating in a cultural context
- Developing a patient-centered approach to communication
- Developing strategies for building patient/client relationships
- Communicating around difficult topics
- Showing sensitivity to cultural issues

When: Wednesday 7th November, 2018
Time: 8:00 am – 9:30 am
Where: Webinar – join via your computer

Register via our website by Monday 5th November 2018 <https://tinyurl.com/ccqhealthpros>
Late registrations will not be accepted

For further information please call 13 11 20
email healthpros@cancerqld.org.au

Speakers:

- Keely Gordon-King, Psychologist, Cancer Counselling Service
- Anna Voloschenko, Advisor, Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Support